Much obliged, Mr. Pluvius. It was very thoughtful to send a storm out to the ball park yesterday when the size up Pitcher Patten and the fourteen hundred or so of the faithful who still cherish the idea that the Senators can play the game were frightened as to the probable consequences if the other fellows kept hammering away at Patten with such good success as they showed in the | Philadelphia Scores a Shutout in the fifth and sixth innings. But when the | First Game. rain, which had been coming down in a drizzle ever since the beginning of the contest, settled down to real business and the spectators were forced to seek shel- They failed to make it

A game won; actually. Any local fun will be pardoned for exclaiming "hooroo."

At a conference of the pttchers on the salary list of the Washington team with Manager Manning in the morning, it was determined that Patten was the youth batting records of the Orioles. He started In to win honors at the very commencement of the game, and the finish was one of st brilliant displays of the pitcher's art that has been seen hereabouts for some time. And while Mr. Patten was caressing the leather with such uncommon success, the hitters of the Manning crowd were mussing up the ambition of Pitcher Nons to pose as a winning twirler. They started in to pummel his shoots and benders right away, and kept at the task so faithfully that he was compelled to give way to Mr. Karns, who was as wild as they turn them out. One of the come in for all sorts of criticism.

The Washingtonians made three runs in the initial inning by Farrell walking to first. Nops misplay on Gear's hit, a passed bail, Clarke's single, and Jordan's crack for one bag. Although Waldron and Clingman drew singles in the second, there was nothing doing in the line of run-getting, but in the succeeding round the air was filled with hits, runs, and the like. The entertainment was opened by Clarke, who landed a hit that permitted him to tarry at first. Dungan waited until four bails had sailed by the plate, when he walked to the first station. Jordan made a reputation by finding the ball for a couple of bags and Clarke and Dungan scored. Coughlin saw Jordan's double and went him one better and gave the young man from Hoboken a chance to be credited with a run. An error of Second Baseman Williams let Coughlin cross the rubber. Jordan was presented with a pass in the fifth, the first of a trio of bases on balls handed out by Pitcher Karns, and came home on the play on Clingman, who was unfortunate enough to send his hit in the direction of Keister, allowing the Bird to inaugurate a deuble play.

Williams scored for the visitors in the double play.

Williams scored for the visitors in the fourth on a double. Keister's out at first, and Brodle's sacrifice. Bresnahan, McGraw, and Seymour tailled in the fifth on three singles, a base on balls given to McGraw and Karns, and an error of Coughlin. The cranks had a scare of the goose-firshy sort in the sixth inning, when the bases quickly filled up, the result of hits by Brodie and Jackson and base on balls given to Bresnahan. No one was out, and it seemed certain that a Ballimore man would cross the plate. But Petten steadied himself for a supreme effort and struck out Karns. McGraw filed to Gear, and Donlin, who comes specify near to being a hitter, punched the dirizzle for three holes.
